

Biography

Prof Downes is an academic group leader and computational astrophysicist focused primarily on understanding the dynamics of flows in and around star forming regions. He is the founding Director of the Centre for Astrophysics & Relativity at Dublin City University. He has extensive expertise in developing and deploying algorithms for partial differential equations involving complex physics in massively parallel high performance computing environments.