

EuroHPC Summit Week 2020 including PRACEdays20

Wednesday 25 March 2020, Session “Bringing your authentic self to work”, 14:40 – 15:00

Inês Crespo, The Roslin Institute, University of Edinburgh

Title: Equality & Diversity in STEM: changing the culture

Abstract:

The Roslin Institute is committed to ensuring that equality and diversity are foremost in everything we do. The Institute holds a gold Athena SWAN award in recognition of the efforts made, over and above standard University-wide policies, to promote gender equality, diversity, and address particular challenges for women in science. In her talk, Inês will speak about the research that inspired these efforts, how these were implemented, and how these initiatives helped improve equality and diversity at the Institute.

Short bio:

Inês Crespo is Research Communications Officer at the University of Edinburgh's Roslin Institute - a world leader in animal biosciences research.

Inês is part of the Institute's Career Development Committee which leads the implementation of efforts towards improved equality and diversity.

With over 12 years of experience in science communication, she worked as communications practitioner and researcher at the Technical University of Munich and at the European Commission's Joint Research Centre.